Liverpool Cotton

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 4.—Cotton, spot, large business; prices unchanged. Sales 23,100 bales, including 19,400 American on the basis of 4.55¢ for middling. Imports 3,857 bales, all American.

New Orleans Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 4.—The cotton market was quieter today with less business all around. Spots stood unchanged at 73-16 for middling. Some disappointment was expressed at the falling off in the export movement, but the spot sales of 21,300 bales in the Liverpool market called forth much bullish comment.

Interest was drawn from the market itself by the dispute over the matter of increasing commissions. One element among the brokers wants commissions on outside business increased to 20¢ for each 100 bales and on members' business to 10¢, while another element wants them to remain at 15¢ and 7.50¢. Today's discussion led to the calling of a special meeting of the brokers' association for next Tuesday.

Spot cotton quiet; sales on the spot 215 bales; to arrive 1,200 bales.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Members of the cotton exchange at a meeting here today agreed to ballot for the liquidation of straddle accounts down to 7.5¢ cents for December contracts. Not long ago local traders refused to consider a lower price than 8¢ cents for December as a basis for liquidation, but Liverpool has marked the price of January-February down to 4.55¢ and today's action was considered an offer to compromise recent disputes.

It was rumored that December contracts were selling on the curb here at 7.5¢ to 7.55¢ and local traders here have prevailing trade conditions no longer warrant the difference of 150 points between Liverpool and New York as fixed by the international conference toward the end of last summer. Otherwise there was no fresh development in the contract situation. The news of the South indicated continued steady spot markets with prices generally unchanged to 1-5¢ higher. Exports for the day were only 13,784 bales, and some apprehend that the advance in war risks may again check business, but cotton is now moving on very nearly a normal scale. Offerings from Texas are fully a cent higher than they were two weeks ago. Today's port receipts were 66,502 bales. Stock at all United States ports 803,340 bales. Interior receipts 42,797 bales.

Cotton Seed Oil

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Cotton seed oil showed decided strength on active covering of shorts and new buying for western and local investment account, inspired by the advance in lard, rumors of export demand and lighter offerings of crude. Final prices were 9 to 25 points net higher. Sales 14,200 barrels.

The market closed firm. Spot $5.10 @ 5.25; November $5.10 @ 5.17; December $5.20 @ 5.22; January $5.34 @ 5.35; February $5.45 @ 5.49; March $5.59 @ 5.60; April $5.67 @ 5.69; May $5.79 @ 5.81; June $5.86 @ 5.93.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Record breaking sales to export houses brought about a strong market today in wheat after a temporary break at the start. The close was buoyant at 11-1 to 11-3 @ 1-1-4 up and oats with a gain of 5-8 @ 3-4 to 3-1. In provisions the outcome varied from 7¢ decline to a rise of 22-1-2.

Grain and provisions closed:
Wheat, December $1.17 5-8; May $1.23 7-8.
Corn, December 70 5-8; May 72 3-4.

Corn, No. 2 yellow, 76 1-4 @ 1-2.
Oats, standard, 49 @ 1-2.

Dry Goods

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Cotton goods were steady today. Yarns were firm. Burlaps were stronger. Worsteds yarns for weaving were irregular. Heavy cotton underwear for late delivery was lower.

TYPES OF MARKET HOGS.

Points That Indicate Good Breeding and Feeding Qualities.
[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

The lard or fat type of hog is the most common market type in the United States. In conformation he is a compact, thick bodied hog on rather short legs. He is of a quiet disposition. The butcher desires a hog that will dress well and yield the largest percentage of high priced cuts of meat. The breeder or feeder should endeavor to supply these, but he must have constitution and feeding capacity to make his operation profitable, according to the United States department of agriculture.

From the breeder's or farmer's point of view fecundity and early maturity are most desirable. Good quality is wanted by both farmer and butcher and is indicated by the fine, silky hair and smooth, mellow skin. The head should be broad and rather short; neck

The Poland China is one of the extreme lard or fat type. It originated in Ohio and is the most common breed of hogs in the United States. The Poland China pig is black in color with six white points, the nose, the tip of the tail and the feet; has a short, broad head, with slightly dish face, and the ears start strong, but break and drop about one-third of their length. The body is thick, broad and compact, and the deposit of fat is quite thick over the entire carcass. The hams and shoulders are heavy, the back is strong and broad, and its early maturing qualities are good.

short and tending the shoulder without creases; jaw full, but not dabby, and the shoulder smooth, deep and well covered. The hog should have a broad, long, straight or slightly arched back with a deep, smooth covering of fat. The loin should be broad and strong and level with the back. Hams should be long, deep, thick and well let down on the hock. The body should be long and deep, the ribs being well sprung and the sides thick and side lines straight. Condition in the fat hog is important from the market standpoint. It is desired to have a thick, even covering of fat over the entire carcass, free from wrinkles or ties. Market demands vary, but a pig of 200 to 300 pounds usually will command ready sale at the best prices.

The bacon type of hog is less common in the United States, but is grown almost exclusively in other countries, especially Denmark. The bacon type pig is less compact and carries less fat than the fat type pig. He is characterized by greater length and depth relatively and with longer head and lighter ham, shoulder and jaw. The side is the main point emphasized in the bacon pig, and the shoulder and ham should be light and level with the side. Depth of body with moderate width is sought, and a smooth carcass with firm flesh is desired. The head is longer and the pig stands on longer legs than the lard type pig. The bacon pig should be marketed at 175 to 200 pounds, and his weight should not be made up of fat, but rather of firm flesh.

Quality in the pig is indicated by fine hair and small, hard bone, fineness of parts in general indicating high quality. High quality is essential to secure the best market price. The butcher or packer wants a hog that will dress a high percentage of edible meat. This is not secured from a coarse, rough or poorly fed hog. To secure as much quality as possible and still retain health, vigor, fecundity and early maturity with good feeding qualities should be the aim of the feeder and breeder. Extreme quality must be carefully avoided because it is usually accompanied by loss of the best breeding and feeding qualities.

Condition in the lard hog is indicated by the covering of fat. The fat should be even and thick over the entire carcass and free from wrinkles and creases. Condition is desirable because it enhances the value of the hog. Condition in the bacon hog is indicated by a smooth, firm covering of flesh, and deposits of fat are not wanted, but a mixing of fat and lean. There should be no wrinkles or ties in the flesh, and the carcass is not wanted thick or heavy.

In studying, judging or selecting breeding stock of pure breeding type, it is important to remember breed type. By breed type is meant the characteristics of the particular breed under study. Each breed of swine has a set standard of desirable points as to size, conformation, form, color and disposition.

Raising Hogs Profitably.
The beginner in hog raising should start with good breeders. Pure bred animals can be had at living prices and are as good for growing pork as prize animals costing high prices.

IN PEN AND YARD.

The goose, like the duck, has practically no crop.

Cramming is a system of forcing feed into young fowl, either by hand or machine, as to put on extra flesh.

Goose feathers range from 60 cents a pound for white to 50 cents for mixed.

Paint adds much to the appearance and durability of poultry buildings and is a good investment.

The intensive system of long houses is recommended for the production of market eggs and the colony system for breeding stock.

Feeding turkeys with chickens is bad policy, and throwing their feed on ground where chickens trot is bound to bring deadly blackhead.

FEEDING TO MAINTAIN EGG PRODUCTION

To feed laying hens in the fall so they will not drop off in egg production is a very important subject, writes a New York poultryman in the National Stockman. In the first place, see to it that the layers do not have to go without plenty of green food, which often-times becomes scarce in late summer and fall on account of its being so dry in so many sections of the country.

We feed them practically the same dry mash mixture and grain food during the fall months we do other seasons of the year, with minor changes in the mixture. For grain food they have an equal mixture of wheat and cracked corn, and when we can get it we add to this 10 per cent of sunflower seed. The dry mash mixture is as follows: Ten pounds of oilmeal, forty pounds beef scrap, forty pounds cornmeal, forty pounds wheat bran and forty pounds ground state bread.

In addition they have a non-clogging self feed hopper, open all the time, and full of pure beef scrap, always before them. We find they do better on this ration, which cost less more animal food than their regular ration. This high protein ration they receive only in the fall and early winter to help them through the molt and also to start them to laying with as little delay as possible. In the winter when confined and also during spring and summer we do not feed them as heavily, especially our breeding stock, which is never forced for abnormal egg production.

Raisers of geese should pay close attention to the care of the feathers, as they represent a considerable source of income where large flocks are kept. The goose feathers are treated generally in this manner: After being spread in some clean, dry, airy place they should be turned over with a fork every few days until thoroughly dried. If placed in bags and well steamed they are more valuable, as the steam has a tendency to purify them, removing much of the oily odor they naturally have. The White Embden geese here pictured are good producers of feathers as well as fine fowl for the holidays.

In addition to this we keep a non-per full of charcoal, "granulated coarse size," oyster shell and grit always before them. We keep charcoal before them because under such forcing conditions something of this kind is necessary to keep the bowels in order. We watch the roost platform carefully, and if any exceptional looseness of the droppings is noted we take the beef scrap away, but this should only be done as a last resort. Feed only tested beef scrap. Testing can be done by placing a small amount in a cup and pouring boiling water over it; if a good grade no offensive odor will be noticeable. A dish of sour milk and water is always before them in large also pans placed on a platform raised eighteen inches from the floor. We have found sour milk to be an excellent digestion corrective. It not only aids digestion but increases it.

Index to Hen Health.
A fowl's comb is always an index to the condition of the bird. When the comb is pale or very black something is wrong, as a healthy fowl shows a bright scarlet color of the comb. Whenever the comb changes color the fowl should be examined for disease.

Whitewash.
It is a good plan to whitewash the poultry house interior every few months to make it brighter and to kill a lot of the poultry vermin. A little crude carbolic acid mixed with the whitewash will kill all the insects it finds in the cracks.

Can She Cook?
A young couple at one of the Anderson mills married some time ago and they went through the usual routine of both working for a few months, then they bought furniture and went to housekeeping. The first day, the bride had to go to the neighbor and ask what to put together to make biscuits. While the girl was learning to cook, both her and her husband's health was impaired.

The same story is repeated dozens of times each year. The girl does odd jobs about the house such as minding the baby, when she is out of school, until she is 12 or 13, then she goes to work in the mill. The mother, who was raised in the country, and learned to cook before coming to the mill, continues to do all the housework. The daughter marries at 16 or 17 (sometimes earlier) and we have the above story.

People who are suffering from indigestion or dyspepsia can not make a home very happy. We feel sorry for the boy who marries a girl, who can't cook. The mother should not be willing to see her daughter assume the responsibilities of a wife without knowing she is able to meet them. The man ought to ask the question, CAN SHE COOK?

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Came to Rescue.

Caton, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Beattie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak, I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him.
